PARTNERSHIP UPDATE

August 2021

Foreword from Eastleigh PCSO Helen Rees and Hedge End PCSO Rachel Barry

HAMPSHIRE
CONSTABULARY

Welcome to the August edition of the Policing Eastleigh partnership newsletter

Over the last few months, you have heard from our Sector Inspector Louise Hubble and our Police Sergeants who serve both Eastleigh and Hedge End.

This month our Police Community Support Officers (PCSO) across the district, who you may often interact with in the local community.

A PCSO is a trained police staff member who works at the heart of the local community, using their skills to provide a visible presence and reassurance.

They often work with members of the public, and local stakeholders, in order to solve local issues and problems such as monitoring speeding outside local schools, reporting vandalism or reducing anti-social behaviour.

While they also assist their frontline policing counterparts in their local Neighbourhood Policing Team (NPT) to gather important information; all with the aim of keeping people and the local community safe.

Here, Eastleigh PCSO Helen Rees and Hedge End PCSO Rachel Barry explain more about their day-to-day roles and why they are so committed to supporting, and protecting, local residents from becoming victims of crime.

Helen has been a PCSO in the Eastleigh area for nearly 15 years and covers the beats of Bishopstoke, Fair Oak and Horton Heath.

She decided to take up the role as a PCSO as she believed it would 'be an interesting role, and ultimately, I was keen to help people'. Helen says the job has changed over the years, but "the core remains focussed on helping to keep vulnerable people safe and engagement with our communities".

For example over the summer term, Helen and her team carried out engagement visits to several of the local schools, where they spoke to the children about the role of the police in the community, showed them the police vehicles and equipment (much to the excitement of the children!) while answering their questions.

Helen said, "Community engagement is vital – and small events like a 'show and tell' session at school was popular but also successful. It provides a positive interaction with the police for children at a young age, meaning that they will be more likely to approach a police officer or PCSO to ask for help if they need to in the future."

While Rachel Barry joined the Eastleigh and Hedge End district as a PCSO in 2016, after initially having ambitions to be an officer. She is based at Hedge End and covers areas such as Netley, Hamble and Bursledon.

Rachel cited that the more she learnt about the role of a PCSO and the impact they can have on the community, “the more I felt it was the job for me”.

It is the day-to-day aspects around community engagement and getting to know local residents and families on her beat which really appealed to her.

“The building of trust and confidence in policing at a local level is a big part of my day-to-day role – especially when it comes to dealing with issues around anti-social behaviour, as well as supporting those families who require our assistance. Alongside that, engaging with local schools and businesses about the role of the police and how we can all play a vital role in keeping the community safe is absolutely key to my role as a PCSO.”

We would encourage those in the local community to engage with and speak to our PCSOs if you see them out and about on their patrols. They are always keen to speak to members of the public should they have any issues or concerns about their local area, and seek ways in which to resolve them.

As a quick reminder, our Eastleigh Police and Hedge End Facebook pages are a great way to follow the team and the work they are doing to tackle crime in order to keep our local community safe.

Police Constable Nicole Houghton, the Officer in Case, from Hampshire Constabulary’s Amberstone Unit said “We would like to commend the women who have shown incredible bravery and courage in coming forward. These are extremely difficult times for these women and it would not have been easy, both emotionally and physically, for either of them to have to re-live their ordeals from when they were younger.

“We know how hard it is to come forward and report these offences, but it is vital to bring those responsible for these offences to justice.

“We are committed to getting justice for victims and have specially trained officers to support them through the process.

“We would encourage anyone who has been a victim of child sexual abuse to contact police on 101 where you can speak with our specialist detectives in confidence.”

As a survivor of sexual abuse, you’re entitled to support whether you report the crime or not. You can access different types of support depending on how you’re feeling and what you decide to do next.
